

Liger for Sale

Available: February 14, 2011

A liger is the offspring of a lion and a tigress. It is bigger than either parent, 10 - 12 ft in length - making it the biggest hybrid cat and, for many people, the most fascinating. Ligers vary in appearance depending on how the genes interact and on which subspecies of lion and tiger are bred together. In general, males grow sparse leonine manes and the facial ruff of a tiger. Males and females have spotted bellies and a striped back. They roar like lions and "chuff" like tigers. The females exhibit conflicting needs for lioness-like sisterhood and tigress-like solitude.

Megan Cashman: 555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858

Megan Cashman
555-444-9858